

The Federal Communications Commission

Dear The Federal Communications Commission,

To the FCC:

Do you actually think it is acceptable that a poor working individual/family who can barely afford phone services should pay the same amount as a business or high-volume user?

This is just wrong.

You cannot deny that this flat fee proposal will indeed primarily impact low-volume and financially disadvantaged phone users.

This increase is clearly supported by large corporations and other financial interests because they would like nothing more than the FCC to shift the financial burden from themselves and more upon the citizens of America.

Reject the flat fee proposal. Its approval is equal to governmental malfeasance!

Sincerely,

Dallin Katt
